Hazelnuts are a small tree or a large shrub, usually growing to around 4m high. They are very adaptable, growing as individual trees, or as a hedge, or espaliered or trained to fit a limited space. They are very hardy (in Bathurst watering is usually needed in the first year for survival, and after that to improve the crop size).

Do you have a West facing wall that needs shelter from the hot sun in summer, but want the light and warmth in the winter? Would you like a healthy nut supplement from your garden, instead of heading to the shops for a plastic-wrapped stale equivalent?

A few hazelnut trees could be the answer!

Hazelnut trees need to be planted in the vicinity of others for successful pollination. You can share your 4 trees with a neighbour if you like.

Go to www.bccan.org.au/hazelnuts for more information, or take your entry form and money to either:
Wendy Grundy at the Bathurst Visitor Information Centre,
OR Evelyn at Conservation Volunteers Australia
(121b Keppel St, just behind 121 Keppel st).
